Passage 1

Hi Sandra,

(1) How's it going? We haven't been in touch for ages. Hope all's well with you. Life's pretty busy here as usual. I've got a new job as a tutor at a school teaching Italian, math, and basic science. I've been working there for almost three months now. It's hard work but I really enjoy it. Teaching young kids is so exciting for me.

(2) Anyway, the really big news is I'm pregnant. We were so surprised. I've been told I'm having twins. Jack and I are over the moon but a bit nervous though. We'll be off on a trip to London this weekend. We want to see Nina and Dylan there. I need some advice from them because they also have twins.

(3) Miss you so much! Always remember our good old days in Tokyo as exchange students 10 years ago. I'd love to hear all your news. Are you still working in Bangkok? We've just moved to a bigger house so maybe you can come and visit us sometime here in Liverpool.

Looking forward to hearing from you!

Love,

Evelyn

Passage 2

In Chinese medicine, food ___1___ as cooling (yin) or heaty (yang). Also, a human body can be said to be cold or hot. Most westerners find this concept difficult to understand because when their bodies feel hot, they cool down ___2___ a cold drink. When the body is cold, one becomes inactive and tired. Just think about ___3___ to the cold winter. All you want to do is ___4___ indoors and sit by the heater. Similarly, when the body is hot, you feel thirsty. The Chinese believe in balancing yin and yang energy in the body to avoid sicknesses. So when the body is cold, one should have hot foods like ginger, coffee, and mangoes. ___5___, when the body is hot, eat some cooling foods such as watermelons, bananas, and yoghurt.
